BOOK DESCRIPTION

Three months ago, Clarke King had the best night of her life—and the worst morning.

Now she’s rebuilt her walls, brick by brick, determined never to let Avalon Kennedy close enough to hurt her again.

So when Avalon shows up in Opal Springs begging for a second chance, Clarke vows to keep her distance. But Avalon has always been a storm, and storms have a way of finding the cracks.

Avalon has never been good at staying.

Not with her parents.

Not with friends.

Not with the girl who made her feel something real.

Leaving Clarke was supposed to protect them both.

Instead, it broke everything.

Now Avalon is back in Texas with one goal: make things right. What starts as an apology and a promise to finish the music she abandoned quickly becomes something deeper—something she's never let herself want before.

A second chance.

A real shot.

A future with the girl she never should've walked away from.
