BOOK DESCRIPTION

She thought she married a boring aristocrat. She actually married a spy hopelessly in love with her.

For four years, John Wilson, the new Marquess of Langford, has loved Lady Elizabeth Knightsbridge in silence. To her, he's nothing more than a dependable family friend.

But when a disastrous elopement threatens to ruin Elizabeth's reputation, John seizes his chance to save her and make his own dream come true: he offers her a marriage of convenience.

Now Elizabeth is discovering that her quiet, steady husband is far more dangerous than he appears. The longer they are married, the more she notices the secrets he cannot explain: late-night disappearances, whispered rumors, and the scent of another woman on his clothes.

As a deadly conspiracy closes around them, Elizabeth must decide whether to trust the husband she's beginning to love, or face the possibility that marrying him was another terrible mistake.

John would do anything to win his wife's love, but he cannot reveal the truth without jeopardizing his mission.

Now he's racing against time. He must unmask the enemy before he loses his wife's trust, or face the prospect of a lifetime of unrequited love.
