BOOK DESCRIPTION

Boston and Carolina were written off before they ever had a fighting chance. Slow brains. Broken pasts. Forgotten souls warehoused in a facility that didn't give a damn if they lived or died. But then they found each other, and everything changed.

Their first conversation was simple. Their first touch was honest. Their first kiss was a promise neither of them knew how to break. In a world that told them they weren't capable of love, they proved that real devotion doesn't require perfection—it just requires showing up, day after day, with your whole heart.

When Carolina gets pregnant, the world tries to tear them apart. But they aren't backing down. They aren't letting anyone split them up, not the facility, not the doubters, and not the system that failed them. They fight for each other with the fierce, unshakeable loyalty of two people who finally found home in each other's arms.

With nothing but each other and the determination to build a life worth living. Boston and Carolina navigate pregnancy, parenthood, and the terrifying beauty of creating a future together. They learn that love isn't about having all the answers. It's about holding on when everything's falling apart.

This is their story. Two broken people. One unbreakable bond.
