BOOK DESCRIPTION

Ruby Hollis is determined not to fall in love with Josh Hardy again.

After a Christmas that left her heartbroken, she's decided she's done with him. She has university, her friends, a new job, and no intention of giving him another chance.

There's just one problem...

Josh Hardy is still in love with her.

Between drunken nights out, football matches, and running in the same social circles, staying away from each other is proving impossible.

But Ruby is struggling more than she's willing to admit, and Josh is still haunted by the death of his twin brother.

They know they love each other.

What they don't know is whether that's enough to put everything they've broken back together.
