Some Broken Windows

by David Macpherson

BOOK DESCRIPTION

A drunken Santa Claus shows up at a Jewish retirement home in May ready to see who has been good boys and girls.

When God moves to Earth, the neighbors give him a hard time.

The Embodiment of Truth goes to her high school dance.

A boy plays stickball with his mother's over tough matzo balls.

Death realizes that he is too pretty to be taken seriously by those he claims, so he hires an actor to pretend to be a more dramatic Death.

Every record in a man's LP collection begins to play nothing but side two of the Fiddler on the Roof Soundtrack.

These and others are nesting in this volume. They are fanciful and sad. They are joyous and ironic. They tell the varied experiences of Jewish Americans.

David Macpherson is an award winning writer and these stories are some of his best.
