BOOK DESCRIPTION

LEVEL 9 // CHRONOS

Project Chronos, Book One

Every saucer ever sighted has the same shape. Someone finally worked out why.

Seventy-four years ago, forty-one crates were sealed in a vault under the Nevada desert. Inside was a broken disc of gray-silver metal that no one could identify and no one could make fly.

Then a four-page paper arrives with an idea: two discs, spinning in opposite directions, pinching spacetime until it opens. Dr. Stewart Coupling is the engineer who works out how to build it.

The new craft is called BD ALPHA. It needs no thrusters, fuel or runway, and it does not travel through space. It leaves.

Eight pilots are quietly reassigned to units that don't exist. Four will fly. The odds are ninety-one percent. A hairline seam in the hull is flagged on every inspection and deferred every time. A signal answers from empty ocean, in groups of four.

On launch morning, the world's first warp craft ignites, and the control center watches the feed go white, then black.

Where do four people go when they leave?

LEVEL 9 // CHRONOS is a standalone-feeling first book of a series, with hard science, a ticking schedule, and an ending you won't see coming.
